

Mission-Oriented Decision Modeling: Aim, Analyze, Achieve

What is Mission-Oriented Decision Modeling (MODM)?

MODM is a method of sequencing the conversations your team needs to have to make decisions for mission execution. It simplifies decisions in a complex organization by gauging the impact each decision has on achieving your mission.

How it Helps You

- Mission orientation focuses the team on what matters most to a decision: the results that reflect your organization’s DNA
- Collaborative, transparent process converts unproductive group conflict into productive team engagement
- Repeatable, standardized model creates a clear and fair decision-making process that boosts the management team’s trust in the process, commitment to the decision, and accountability for action

Mission/Strategic Oriented Priorities

Each branch supports the ones below it, creating alignment of roles to mission. Having branch weights and gauging key characteristics bring objective management scoring as inputs.

How it works

Step 1: Generate a mission-priority tree.

Step 2: Weigh the impact of priorities on mission.

Step 3: Align decisions to the functions they affect.

Step 4: Gauge how much each decision affects the function.

Step 5: Evaluate the combined mission and decision alignment.

Step 6: Sequence the list to get the biggest “bang-for-your-buck” decisions for management discussion.
